FOUNDER BOTTLENECK DIAGNOSTIC

You hired good people. Decisions still come back to you.

Last updated October 2026

The short version

You hired a COO, a Head of Ops or a senior lead so the company would depend less on you. It still depends on you, and you're starting to wonder if you hired the wrong person.

Maybe you did. Maybe it's the right person in a setup where they can't own anything. One 90-minute session finds out which. It's not for you if you're at idea stage or you want ongoing coaching.

Who's behind it

I'm Trung. Before this I led infrastructure at Workpath. The job was taking my team off the critical path, so about six product teams could ship without waiting on us. Now I do that for founders.

What a founder said

> "Endless chaos from too many projects with the wrong people, combined with my inability to let go."
>
> Alex, founder, IT services company (translated from German)

He bought a second engagement.

What you walk out with

- A written diagnosis: the hire or the setup around them
- The thing to stop doing, said plainly
- The one move to make instead

If you can't tell your COO what you got in two sentences, the session missed.

How it works

Remote, 90 minutes, €750. Book the session, no call needed first. Already connected on LinkedIn? DM me "diagnostic".

If it's worth fixing, the next step is The Handoff: we change who decides what with your leader in the room, run it that way for 30 days and count what still comes back to you. Book it within 30 days of the session and the €750 comes off its price.
